

New Research on the Battle of Eutaw Springs

Orangeburgh District
September 8, 1781

Charles B. Baxley

Current Eutaw Springs research is sponsored by Southern Campaigns of the American Revolution, the South Carolina Battleground Preservation Trust with contributions from a grant from the American Battlefield Protection Program, National Park Service, and by the Historic Mapping Congress.

Eutaw Springs battleground property now being acquired for preservation and interpretation by The Civil War Trust/Campaign 1776 and the South Carolina Battleground Preservation Trust.

Eutaw Springs Research Team members and contributors:

Douglas W. Bostick, Principal Investigator, Charles B. Baxley, co-Principal Investigator, Steve J. Rauch, C. Leon Harris, PhD, David P. Reuwer, Jeffrey J. Kline, MD, Margaret G. Waters, Ed Forte, J. Brett Bennett, Stephen R. Wenzell, William Lee Anderson, III, Richard Watkins, Stephen Katzberg, PhD, Michael Yianopoulos, Hugh Dussek, PhD, J. Keith Gourdin, Daniel Murphy, Jim Piecuch, PhD, and C. Scott Butler.

The research contained within this presentation is preliminary and in some cases speculative. It has not been independently verified, and as such should be considered only yone possible explanation for the actions and outcomes of the historic figures and events involved.

With this in mind, the speaker has elected not to include the written materials with this presentation as at this time, they would not be appropriate for dissemination beyond the scope of this talk.

Please enjoy the audio version of this presentation, and if you have any questions or comments, feel free to contact the author/speaker directly.

Charles B. Baxley can be contacted through his website:
Southern Campaigns of the American Revolution
<http://www.southerncampaign.org>

While you are at his website, check out the wealth of information about the American Revolution contained there.